The Lord's Day by Noelle Wells

Thank you that today We are a little less alone. This façade of isolation Is made impotent this day. We gather here, Sore hearts undone, Late morning's blossomed air Rests against the window's face Down each side and back. We settle down Pew by pew, Dust slipping through the light, Then hear the call to worship You Whose fullness condescends To bind our alien souls alike In unison to praise.

Noelle Wells is a pastor's wife and mother to three delightful little ones. She is a biblical counselor and aspiring writer residing in Middletown, PA
